It's only a relay race.

Homecoming royalty, Ginny Dunker, Linda Silverstein, Terry Fischer, Julie Drake, and Celeste Withey climaxed the Presidential Parade.

Red Baron, Barry Mumm, won the competition for German Club.

Knights Attained Victory over the Enemy

"VOTE." was victorious! At the Rah-Rah Richard Rally cheerers screamed for success. Their reward came with the Knight's 40-0 victory at the campaign. In the evening, triumphant team members surreptitiously gazed at their personal posters decorating the walls of the Inaugural Ball. Nearby, excited voters rejoiced over the victory at this year's Homecoming election!

The coronation had to wait! First Lady, Terry Fischer, had a secret to tell Tom Lonnborg.

Cheerleader Nancy Nye, was sure that her balloons would attract buyers.

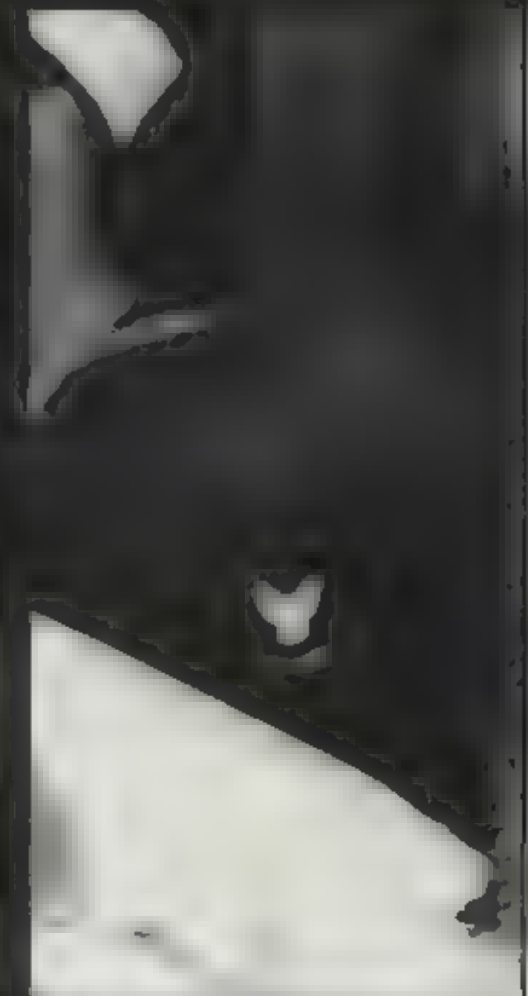

The pep rally was secondary to Kathy Weiss, who was more interested in finding friends among the crowd.

Sadie Inspired Soul

At the museum, Jim Ryan, inevitably, directed those who did not simply to have command of "Take those shoes off!" On the dance floor, girls winced from stretching pain as the lady-lads crashed down on their shoddest feet. On stage, the rain played flushed and perspiration beads trickled down his face. At the closing gala, boys gobbled down brownies as their dates vigorously pulled them over the brownie-pilled "Sadie Goes Soul."

Rhythms Pounded at Knight Clubs

Flashing lights lit up five hundred faces two thousand times, spotting the look of joy, the look of loneliness, the look of ecstasy, the look of love. Each face reflected a unique feeling. Each song the band played touched those feelings: a song of sorrow, a song of rapture, a song of passion, a song of soul released the fever inside Knight Klub dancers.

Drill team members Joyce Dickinson and Bonny Schumaker exhibited their club's float

Winter Triumvirate Brightened Tip-Off Weekend

A pep rally, game, and dance made up Nicolet's 1968 Tip-Off Weekend-Winter Triumvirate. Friday afternoon, excitement rose when the band burst into a trumpet fanfare and the cheerleaders, pom-poms waving, led a spirited fight yell. As floats with a Roman flavor paraded around the gym, sophomores cheered the sight of their unexpected banner unrolling from the ceiling. The unusual arrived when boys seated on scooters were dragged across the gym in chariot race competition. Excitement continued Friday night as everyone showed up to cheer the Knights on to a thrill-filled victory against Brookfield East. Finally, Saturday night, the in-crowd grooved at the annual Tip-Off sock hop to the soul beat of Big Pit and the Cheaters. That was the scene for Tip-Off Weekend, 1968.

The swimmers' Most Kissable Emperor, Steve Rodwell, won congratulations for his victory in this year's contest.

The chariot race brought lots of fun and laughs to seniors Claudia Scheibel, Dave Lovos, and Gary Levin.

Girl-hungry sailors eyed Navy nurse Laurie Picus after proclaiming "There Is Nothing Like a Dame."

"Stingy bum!" Bloody Mary (Janice Rudolph) ardently displayed her contempt for hesitant G.I. customers.

Thinking she was through with that French man forever, Nellie (Vicki Boxer) washed that man right outa her hair.

South Pacific Beckoned Nicolet

"You hear something call you?" Bali Hai . . . Bali Hai! Nicolet High School heard the call, and the Fine Arts Department blended its response into its production of Rogers and Hammerstein's South Pacific. Long hours of practice in singing, choreography and acting made throats, feet, and heads throb. "Speak louder . . . When you're singing, get closer to that mike."

Now, give it all you've got on the first beat! . . . Orchestral! Can't you play a little softer? . . . Isn't that set ready yet? What's going on back there? . . . Get those girls out on stage! . . . What do you mean she can't turn the water off? . . . Black out! Down-two-three, Up-two-three!"

Emile (Jim Peeples) and Nellie (Laurie Picus) waltzed through the evening, confident of their love.

Fiesta Night Promoted Good Will,

A Fiesta Night clown, Georgina Burgess, surveyed exchange students' exhibits.

Ninoret girls dressed in colorful Spanish costumes performed intricate steps of a Flamenco dance.

Students lent their hands to serve mounds of spaghetti.

Offered Entertainment for Visitors

A festive blend of colors, odors, and languages permeated Nicolet's cafeteria during Fiesta Night '69. While Americans wound spaghetti, Nicolet language students spiced the atmosphere with international attire and concessions. Paper flowers bloomed from the wheelbarrows of wandering French Club members. The aroma of freshly-baked pastries invited samplers to the German booth for tortes, the Russian booth for tea cookies, and the Yankee booth for brownies. At the Spanish Club booth students released their tensions by bombarding a victim with shaving-cream pies. Enthusiastic students in authentic and hand-made costumes highlighted the dance program. During Fiesta Night 1969 the motto of A.F.S., "Walk together, talk together, all ye peoples of the earth, for then, and only then, shall ye have peace," echoed through the halls of Nicolet.

Celeste Withey and Till Götting enjoyed swinging through the German Club dance during a Fiesta Night rehearsal

For the Fiesta Night pageant, dancing girls imported a little bit of Israel to Nicolet

Fiesta Night '69 resounded with Nicolet students singing their hopes for liberty, peace, and brotherhood

Talent Lit Nicolet Stage

As emcees Jim Dahlman and Dave Bartels opened the 1969 Variety Show, they assured the audience of a great show. Judging from the response, the audience agreed. Viewers burst into laughter at the ventriloquist's dummy, a duck, and at the novelty song and dance act. Their cares crept away as a performer played the guitar and sang Simon and Garfunkel's "Feelin' Groovy." When the baton twirler maneuvered her fire-ridden baton, a tense silence enveloped the auditorium. Throughout the show, Nicolet gave the audience its gift of talent.

Jodi Peck practiced to achieve a transition from her front attitude to the rest of her jazz routine.

The Stage Band, under the direction of Variety Show Coordinator Mr. Bloemers, watched their scores carefully while they played the fast uptempo jazz selection "Brownsville Express."

Rick Rudolph concentrated on perfecting his fingering as he performed the "Ballad of Jed Clampett" for the Variety Show.

The first time, Janet was afraid of falling, but Jim (probably trembling too) brought her safely from the roof!

Stage crew member Bonnie Robertson refilled her paintbrush with paint to finish a section of the exterior of the Keller's home

Cooperative Effort Produced "Miracle" at Nicolet

"110% of your time and effort will be required to produce a performance," Director Mr. Jones warned eager students at the Wednesday and Thursday try-outs for "The Miracle Worker". The following week the cast members and student director began concentrated work on blocking and memorizing lines. Practice on interpretation began and continued every afternoon from 3:00—5:00 for the following three weeks.

Meanwhile a busy stage crew began building the two-level house set and creating simple props for transforming the front yard into a railroad station, Perkins Institution for the Blind, and a garden house. At the same time prop girls sought glasses for Annie, food, keys, and silverware. During the play their job was to have the props on the appropriate side of the stage and in the actors' hands for entrances.

For dress rehearsal and the performances, Theater Arts Club members artfully applied make-up and adjusted costumes to transform students into persons of another age. On stage the world of the Kellers once again became reality, showing the end of Helen's frustration and the beginning of her miracle.

Not watching her hands was one of the techniques Jane Herold had to learn in taking the role of a blind girl. Mr. Jones aided her in simulating the sightless stare.

To protect Annie and Helen during their fight scenes student director Jody Brindis read actions to Janet Stampfl and Jane Herold as they learned synchronization of their movements.

Camelot's Romance Graced Prom 1968

Sluicing rain cascading down the stained glass windows failed to ruin Prom 1968. Over the bridge the dewy taffetas and iridescent, nub by silks complemented the aura of Camelot. All around, the glow spread from rainbow leaves, fuzzy greenery, inky cloaks on Merlin's maiden's and hazy lanterns. The grand march, reminiscent of processions of lords and ladies in earlier times, swept bedecked couples round the room, around again, until everyone swung, smiling and glistening, into medieval night.

Posed and beaming, the court prepared to plunge into the whirl of the grand march

Surrounded by young lords and ladies, school principal Dr. Reels and his damsel chatted amiably

Fred Croen, Nicolet's Zeus, declared thumbs up for Field Day, 1968

Janet Levi concentrated on the intricate footwork she and Johan Segerdahl devised for the three legged race

Herculean Challenges Spurred Competition

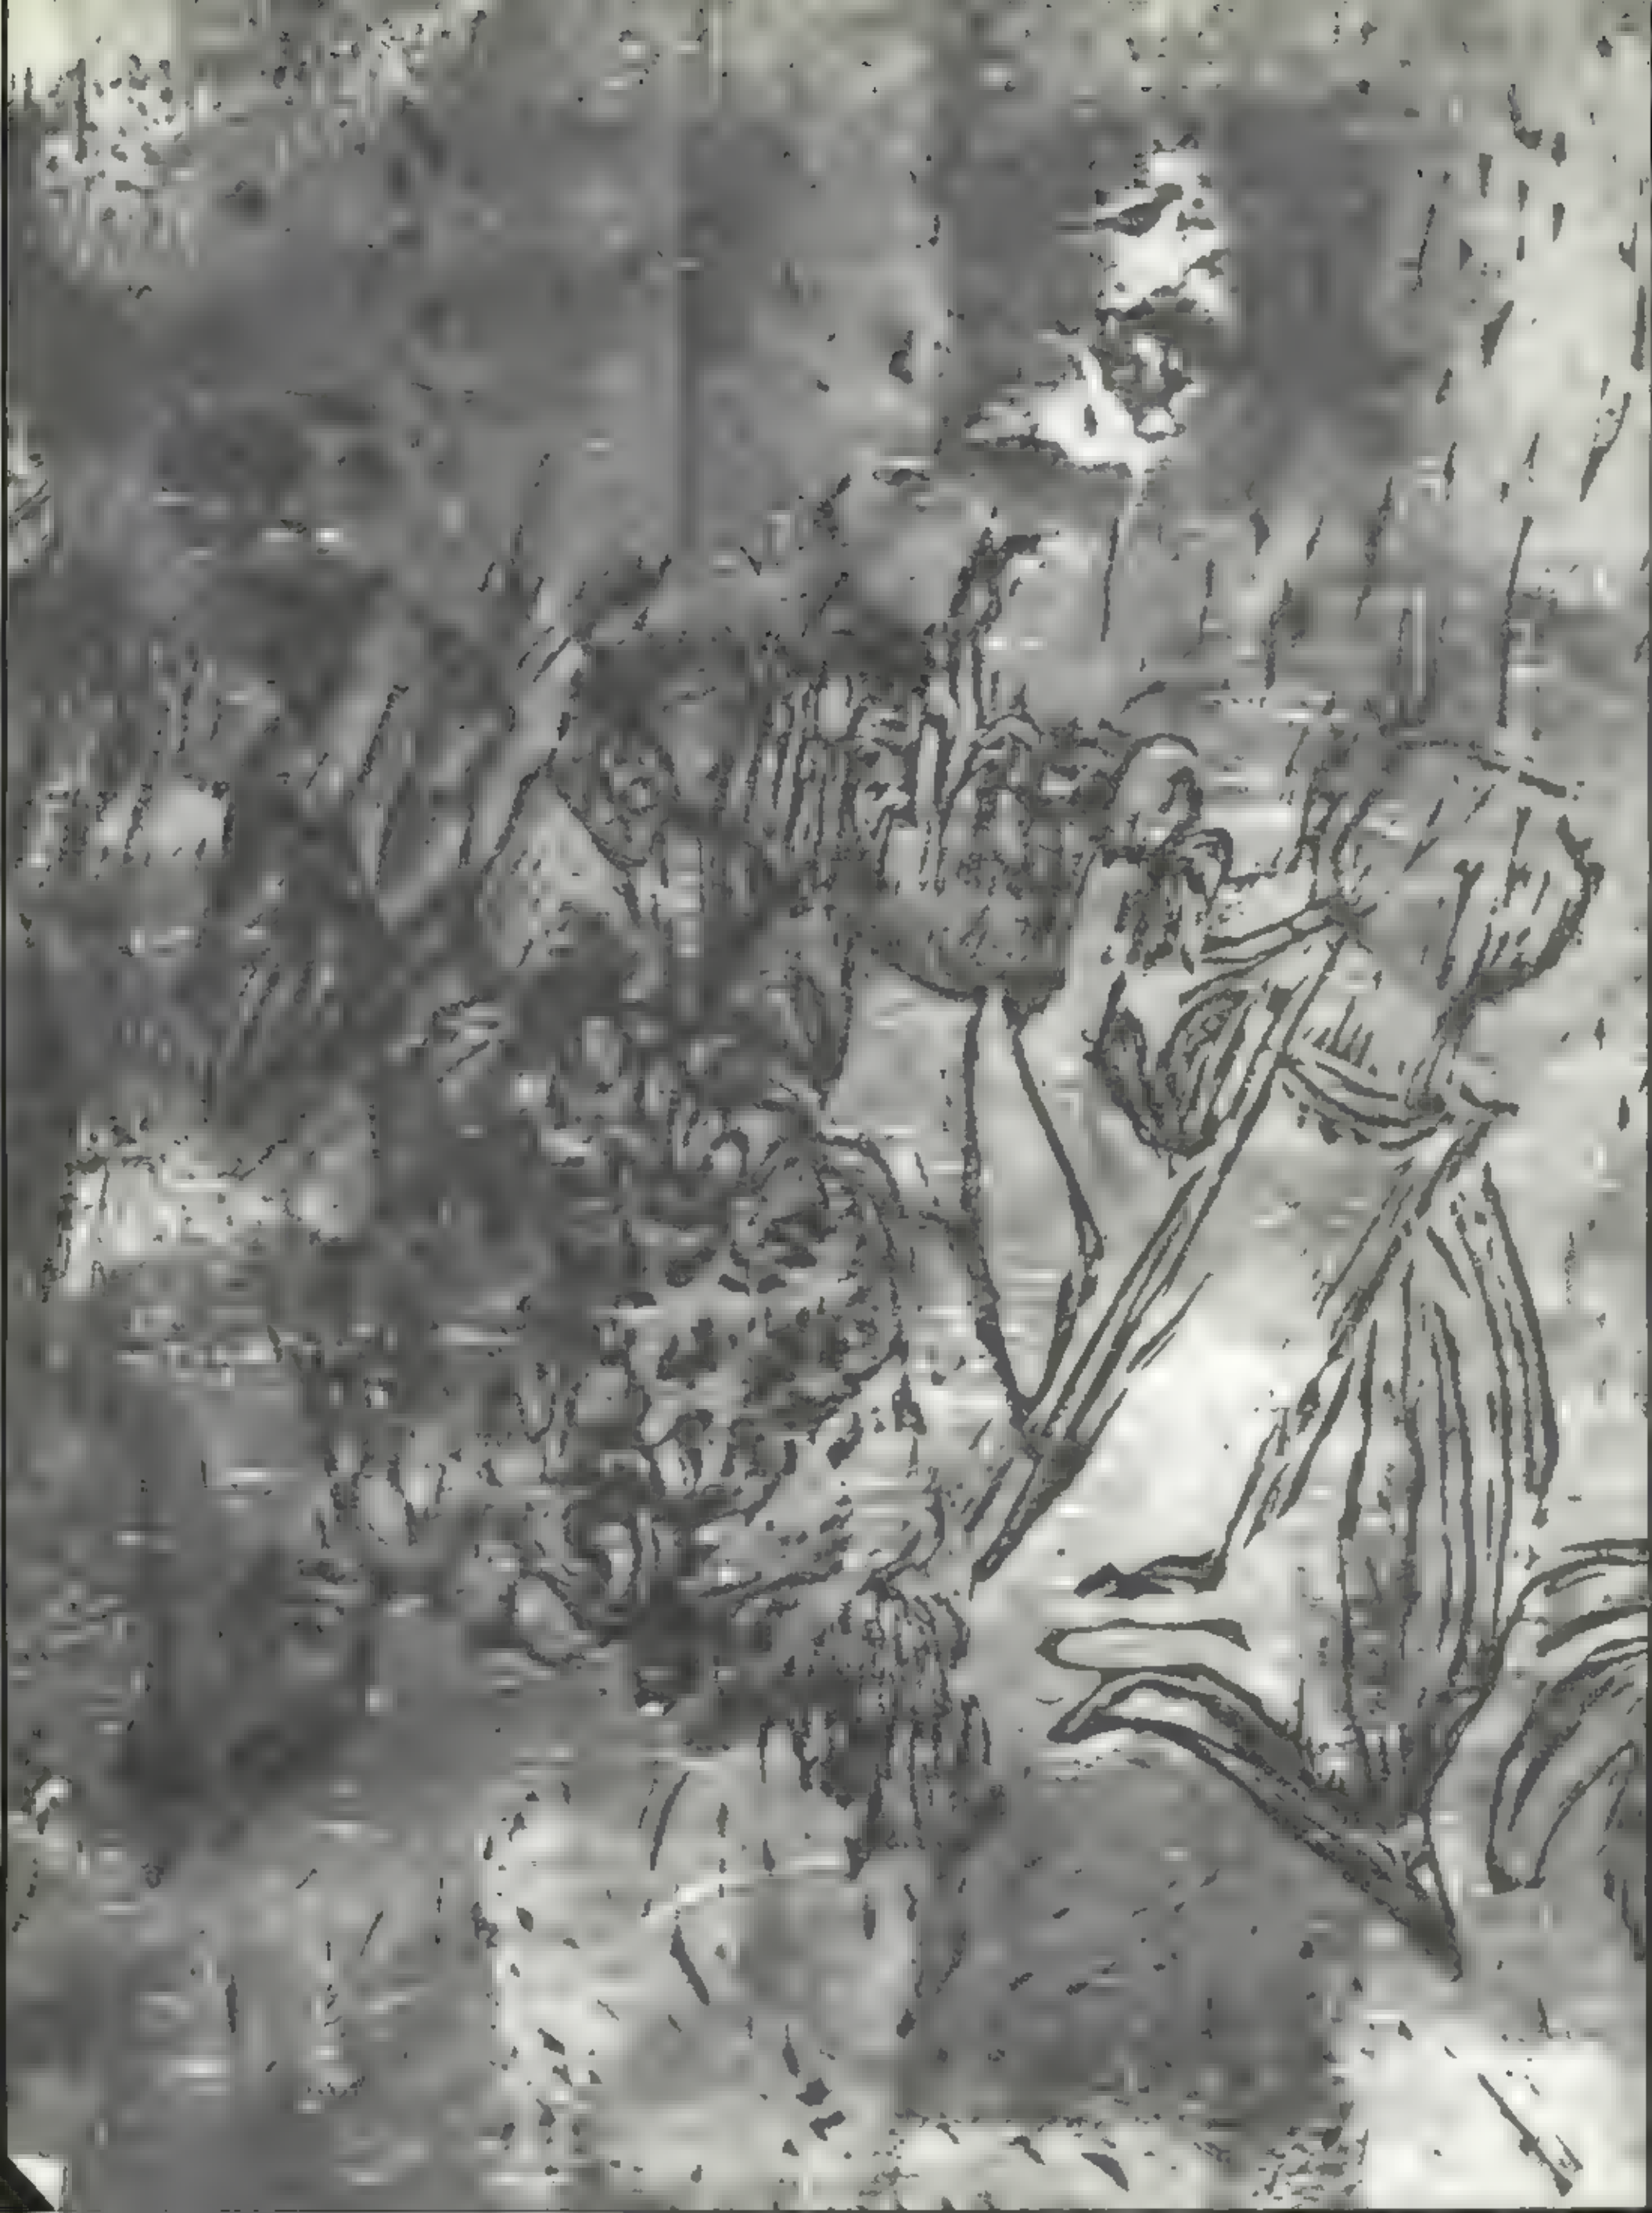

Class banners—"Zeus Was A Senior," "The Gorgon Had 69 Heads," "Mercury Lived To Be 70," and "Mount Olympus, Home Of The Frosh"—inspired Field Day, 1968. Egg catchers concentrated on white objects in the sky. Squinting faces propelled barefooted relay runners into the winning places. Wincing of pretended pain covered a frosh's face as a sophomore boy tried to stamp out her ballooned ankle. Sunburned faces proclaimed another successful Field Day in this Olympic year.

Jump the hurdle. Crawl under the hurdle. Swing and jump the rope," flashed through Bill Hiller's mind.

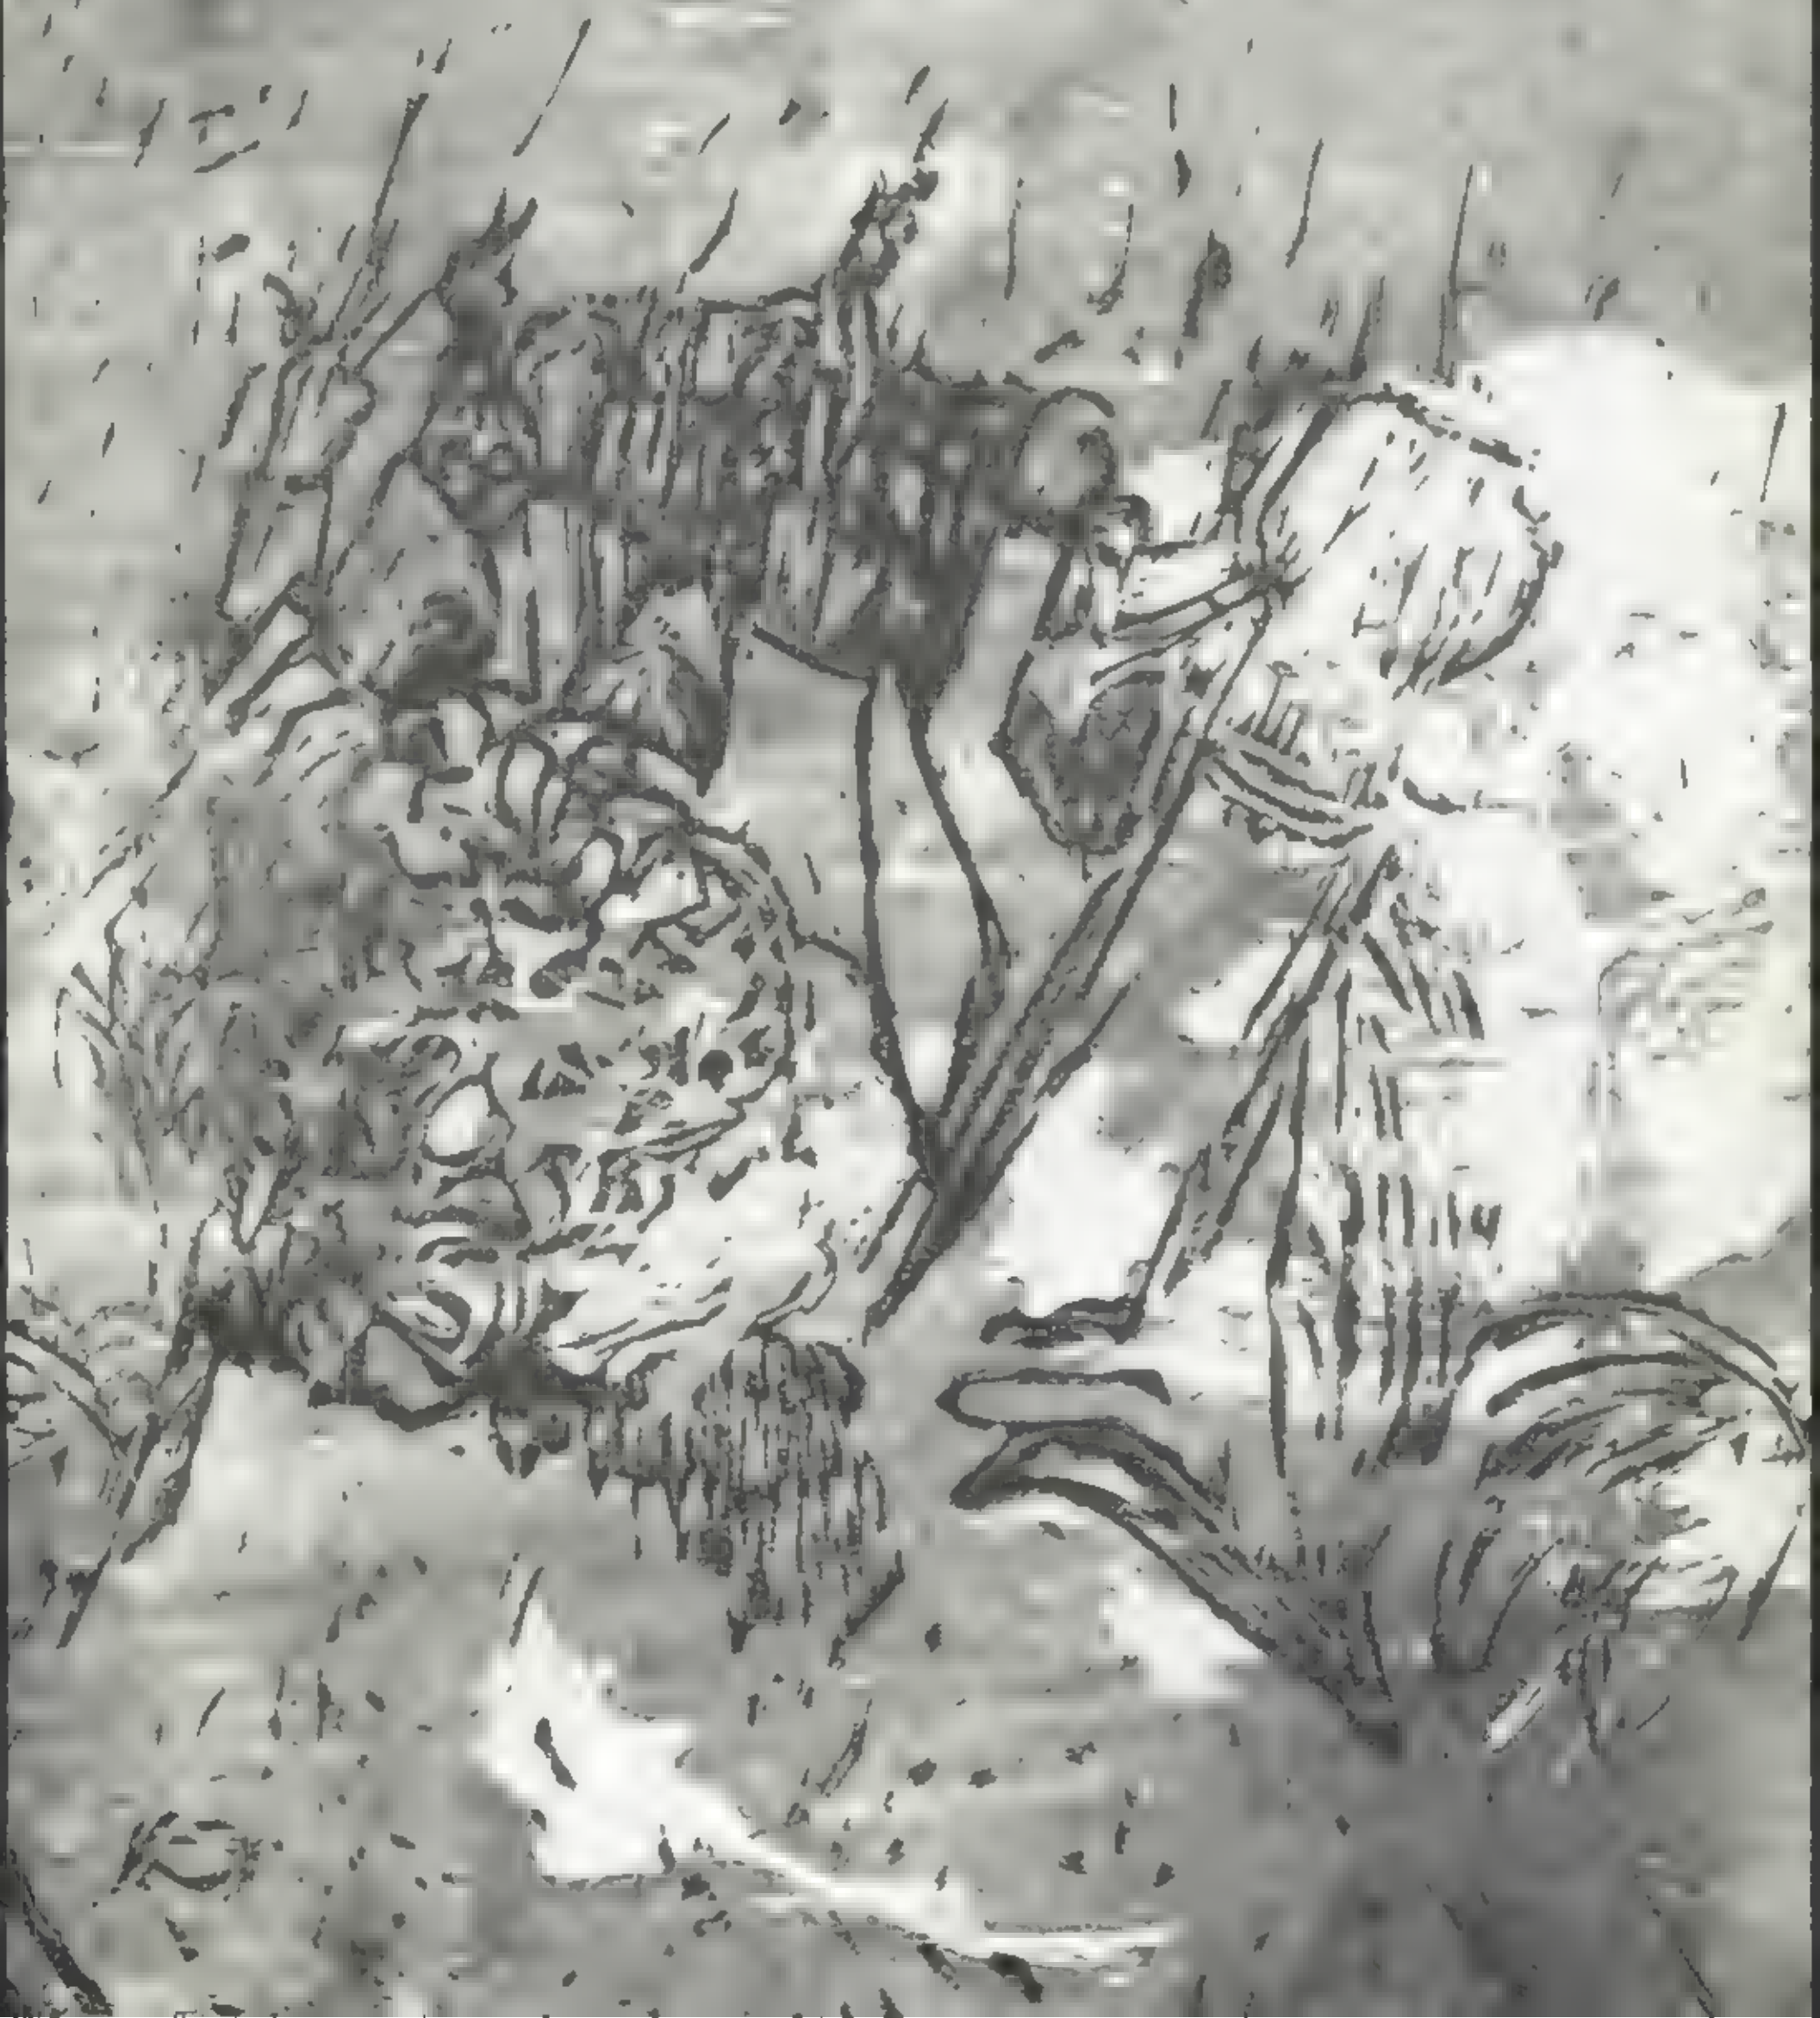

Laurie Picus and Frank Olbrys, anxious to help the junior class earn the 10 points for grapefruit game, exchanged strategies.

Big hands brought victory as members of all four classes tried to fill awaiting baskets with coke tops.

DEPARTMENTS

Fine Arts Developed Sensitivities

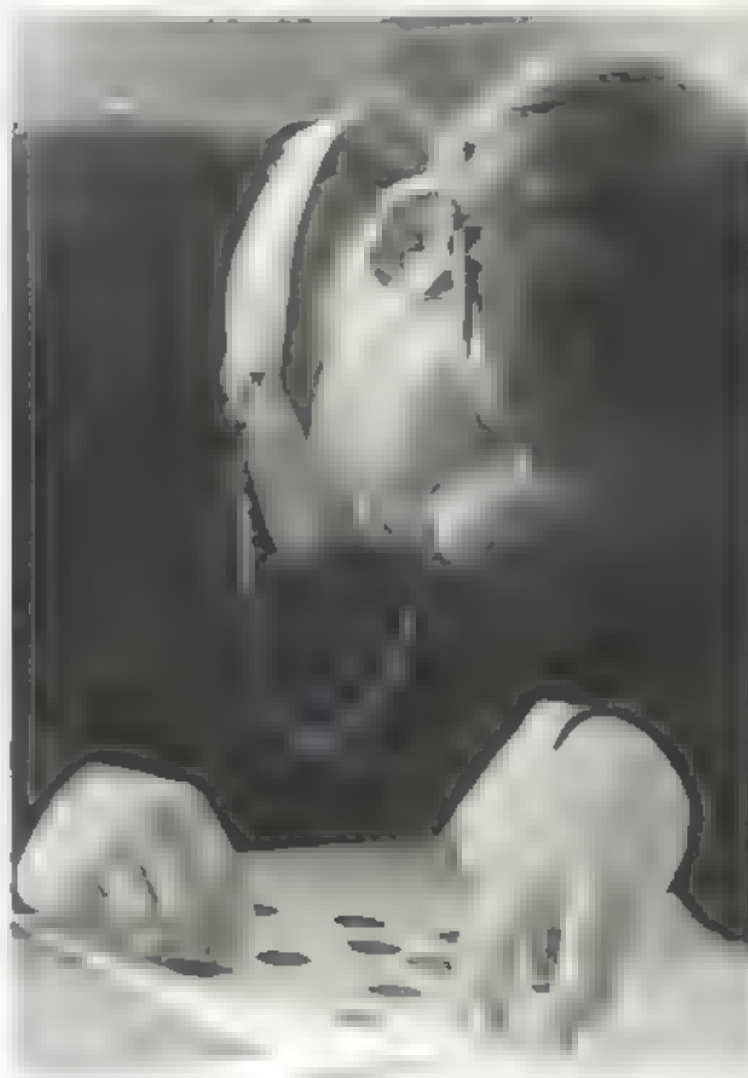

Sing a song about expression. With tools and clay and paint in the art room, art students communicated sensations to others. Beginning dramatists became new personalities before an audience. Chorus and band set emotions to music and coaxed the composition out of a big brass horn. Nicolet Fine Arts students conceived and created

Sketching Nicolet as he saw it. Paul Pestka stood before his easel.

Larry Davidman concentrated on varying the intensity of a color.

English Widened Horizons

Students searched for the words to convey the message with impact. They referred to the reading, drew from the discussion, compiled the notes, and used the dictionary. Classes throughout Nicolet accepted the challenge of relating Pip, Silas Marner, Jay Gatsby, or Achilles to a contemporary counterpart. Through the eyes of great authors and poets, English students explored life in new dimensions.

Tim Adashek admitted that the essay had been assigned two weeks earlier but the night before the theme was due.

In the early weeks of language study, Sue Moser tried to pronounce an unfamiliar Spanish sound

Language Expanded the World of Words

Earphones muffled outside noises, but the students were baffled by sounds coming over the wires. As the lesson played for a second time, listeners heard familiar sounds, but still did not comprehend. At last they weeded words from the mumble jumble, formed sentences from the words, and finally spoke fluently.

With the paraphernalia used in teaching Russian before him, Mr. Lowder explained a verb drill before the class responded to the tape

Social Studies Department brought the 1968 election closer to the students when opposing candidates Carol Baumann and Glen Davis presented their views at an after school assembly.

Dave Nye made use of Mr. Allen's background in the field of urban affairs for his independent study project.

Present Reflected Past Events

Through lectures, discussions, films, and books, social studies class became aware of similarities between the tumultuous events of 1968 and 1969—civil disorder, war protest, and elections—and the struggles of past eras. Draft-card burners and anti-Vietnam protesters seemed to follow the precedent set by the Civil War draft dodgers. The urban rumblings which rocked the U.S. echoed the French Revolution. Americans adjusted to new leadership as they had for over two hundred years. Perhaps history does repeat.

In a supplementary experiment, Hiedi Montag observed a rabbit's growth eating habits, and living habits.

Science Broadened Minds

The enthusiastic science student fervently discussed the evolution of man. Then, in the lab, after setting his face with determination, he repeatedly combined the chemicals until a trace of yellow substance appeared. After this, in the physics room, the flower-like design produced by the flashing strobe light on the spinning wheel reflected in his eyes. Thus, his study of mind, matter, and motion was complete.

Joanne Lewis performed an electrolysis of water in which water decomposes into its two components.

In squinting, Mark Boxer exemplified the typical behavior of a beginning biology student learning the proper use of a microscope.

Perseverance Solved Math Puzzles

After having new concepts presented to him, the perplexed math student went home. There, scratch outs, scribbling, and frustration forced the "if . . . then . . ." method of proof to make his mind reason logically. Suddenly his ideas fell into a valid pattern, which formed the solution set. His tired, but beaming face symbolized his extreme elation in finally achieving his goal

Dan Dedrick grafted the parabola $y=x^2$ to help his advanced math class understand the function

Kim Starke concentrated while employing angle bisectors and segment midpoints to prove angles A and B congruent

Physical Education Expanded Activities

Girls in sky blue gym suits and boys in loose, light blue shorts and red and blue T-shirts stretched, bent, and strained during the year in physical education classes. After five minutes of exercises the boys became team members in such games as soccer, basketball, or water polo. Junior and senior girls participated in elective activities ranging from gymnastics to golf. Students of all ages ended the year with aching muscles but improved physical condition.

Robin Beyers spent many gym classes at the parallel bars practicing pulling her legs together and pointing her toes to succeed in ski tests.

Linda Dohman witnessed a frequent contest of badminton, as Marilyn Miller hit the birdie straight up to the gym's rafters.

The gym class wrestler in the down position recaptured two points as soon as he finished his reversal.

Greg Chapman in disguise strained through smoke and blinding to apply the finishing touches on his house jack

Hands tightly gripped, metal-shop student Richard Greaves drilled blade holes into an almost completed hack saw frame

Industrial Arts Echoed Enterprise

Promptly at 8 00, the shrill sound of band saws and the rhythmic pounding of drill presses declared that Nicolet's woodworking shop was again at work. In the drafting room the audible hum of the blue-print machine and the stifling smell of ammonia, along with the snapping of pencil leads, indicated that student engineers and architects had also begun work. At 2:49 the power was cut, sawdust settled, and drawing machines were again hung neatly in place as the wheels and gears of Nicolet's Industrial Arts Department ground to a halt

Draftsman Jeff Roosen carefully piloted his 4H pencil across a half-sectioned drawing of Plate 8 titled Hood Bearing

Paul Gallner added a masculine touch to Family Living class

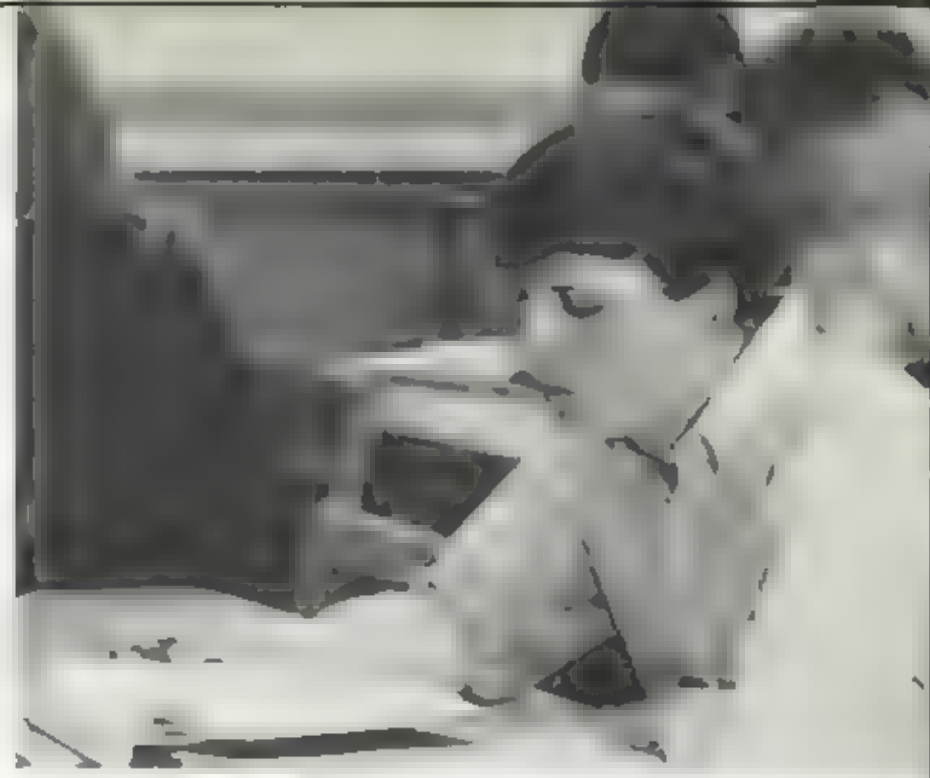

Home Economics Prepared Students for the Future

Sewing, cooking, designing homes, and family living gave a variety of practical and interesting training to the Nicolet student. In cooking class smiles and frowns reflected the results of experiments with new recipes. Across the hall the hum of sewing machines and the snipping of scissors accompanied faces intent upon their creative projects. In the other courses offered by the Home Economics department imagination sketched the blue prints for designing model homes, and combined knowledge was applied to individual and family problems.

Miss Gullickson gave Renee Naimon advice on hand stitching hooks and eyes

Judi Rozran skeptically watched as Debra Peters stirred and Judy Lehn added melted chocolate to the cake batter

Bill Radtke referred to the test as Mr. Wolf explained the transaction

Business Department Speeded Along

A typing student struck the wrong key as he raced to finish a letter's closing. A shorthand student forgot the "Dear Sir" symbol as she scribbled the dictation. A bookkeeper forgot to list the check number. In the beginning weeks, business students frequently fumbled, but with practice they grasped the basic skills. Shortly, students pushed themselves, constantly gaining speed and proficiency

Eyes off the keys was the most important lesson

Libraries Evoked Students' Emotions

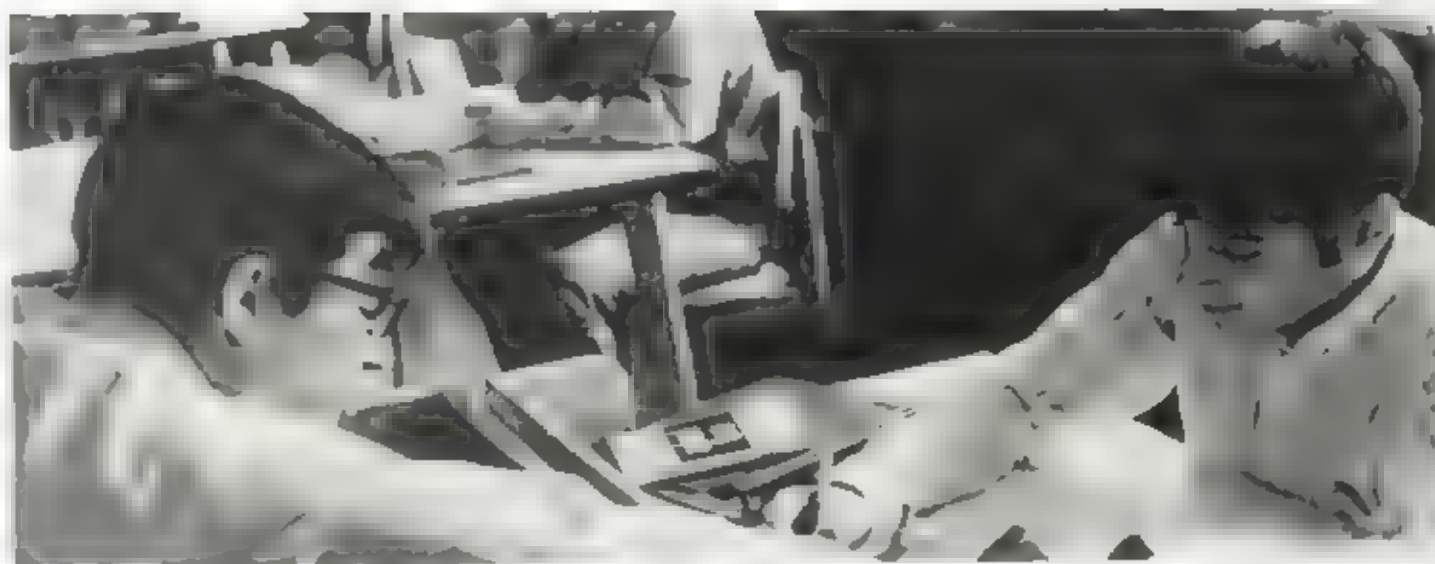

The library should have conjured memories of frantic research, shuffling books, and an overused card catalogue. Instead it recalled the embarrassment of being isolated to a corner, the self-consciousness of trying to tiptoe across the library floor yet producing a resounding echo, the anger of arriving at the library in hopes of doing research but finding all the seats occupied, the frustration of searching for the one book needed for the assignment, and the boredom of being alone because none of the group showed up that hour.

At the close of school Shela Feiss searched the Li-Ly box of the card catalogue to find the book Lord of the Flies.

Reading required deep concentration.

In the quiet library atmosphere, Bill Hiller extended a helping arm to Mike Kimmel on a mathematical problem.

Nurse Analyzed Ailments

Attendance at the nurse's office fluctuated from day to day. Typical days revealed students with flushed faces, watery eyes, painful expressions, swollen ankles or deep cuts. Busier days seemed to coincide with Monday mornings, the 600 in girls' gym classes, and the end of the six weeks. No matter how occupied or what the situation created, Mrs. Jones faced the crisis

John Santelippo, can you hear me?

Hectic Guidance Office Aided Inquisitive Students

Phones rang. Voices buzzed. Students poured over college material. A pleasant voice inquired, "Your name please. Oh, yes, she'll be with you in a moment. Please be seated." Feet shuffled to and fro. Doors opened and closed with a click. Behind those doors students conferred with counselors. Here counselors continually provided answers about colleges, solutions to grade problems and guidance in scheduling

CLUBS

Shield Art and Shield Editorial Merged

Wednesdays after school, every noon, Friday nights and study halls constituted time used by members to create Shield. Writers conferred with photographers in order to capture expressions and emotions that revealed the scene. They visited clubs or attended specials and sport events to observe actions and reactions. Then Shield Editorial members pondered ideas, scribbled words, revised sentences, and worried about November eleventh, December eighteenth, January twenty-ninth, and March twelfth deadlines

As the clock struck six, Shield Editorial members waited to hear the approval for printing or the comments for revising

Friday night at Shield Editorial, students groped for ideas, snatched a bite to eat, and strove to finish articles

Yearbook editors Nancy Rudberg, Linda Lichter and Julie Schur checked the ladder for the page numbers of the second deadline articles

Comparing last year's pictures to recent ones, Shield Art Staff members checked for incorrect labeling of pictures

Art Staff members marked the backs of portraits with names and then alphabetized the packets

Early Saturday morning while most students of Nicolet recovered from a week of school, a few industrious people sat at the drawing board in the art room. While some sleepy eyed members of Shield Art arranged and rearranged pictures and articles to form a page of harmonious black and white, other members interrupted the arranging of pages to draw attention to an unusual pose by one of their classmates. Laughter echoed through the empty halls as the workers relaxed to enjoy the pictures. Then their faces returned to determined expressions as they attempted to find the unusual and create an attractive yearbook

Debbie Padway checked portrait names with class lists, hoping to find pictures for every name

Camera Club Practiced New Techniques

Camera Club members found themselves leaning out of a moving truck going down Wisconsin Avenue or squatting in the path of the arid desert dome at Mitchell Park Conservatory. With each shot, they tried to use new techniques of photography they had learned from programs sponsored by Eastman-Kodak Company. New ways to capture moods, balance composition, and mount finished prints added to each member's knowledge of photography.

Shield Photography Focused on Faces

Looking through the shutter's eye, each Shield photographer questioned the many factors necessary for a good yearbook picture. "Facial? Composition balanced? Interesting? Suitable for yearbook? Exposure correct?" ... Click!

Shield photographers examined proof sheets for yearbook projects.

Knight's Page Gained a New Image

Knight's Page took a new look at the news. Whether it was a stimulating backstage interview with Peter, Paul, and Mary or the thrilling action of the Knights going down the field for a touchdown, Knight's Page recorded the scene. A new emphasis placed on editorials reflected the opinions of Nicolet students on topics of current interest such as drugs, Vietnam, and censorship. Even the ads were different: they were bigger and more artistic. The '68-69 Knight's Page quickened the pace for the now generation of Nicolet.

The day before the paper went to press, co-editors Mary Bernstein and Rick Ridberg discussed proof correction with the printer.

At the printer's, editorial staff members checked the galley for last-minute changes.

Crest Featured Creativity

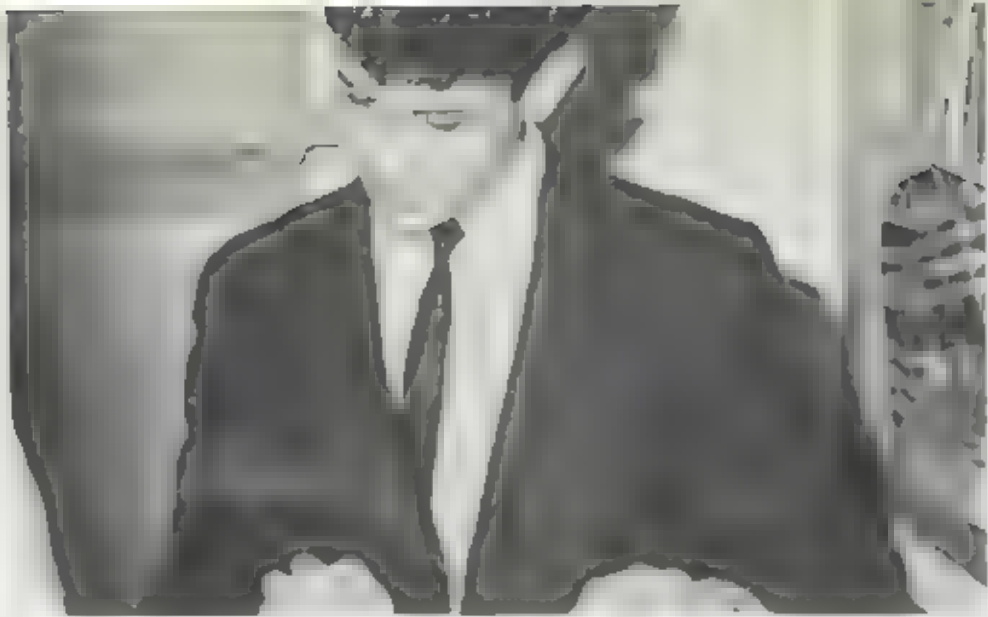

The works in Nicolet's literary magazine, Crest had its origins largely in two sources: inspiration and assigned class work. These inspirations and assignments developed into poems, articles, and essays which were finally submitted to the Crest staff. Then the submitted material became the topic of discussion at a Crest literary staff meeting. Members judged the work on such criteria as reader interest, style, and originality. Then if the staff wished to recommend any revisions, members contacted the author of the piece. In spring the art and production staff replaced the literary staff to lay out the accepted submissions in an artful manner and to design the 1969 Crest cover. The final step was the return of the articles in magazine form to Nicolet students.

Editors Maureen Turim and Wendy Evrard glanced at the final agenda before a Crest meeting

As affirmative speaker Mark Rudolph presented the contentions of teammate Dave Bate and himself, opponents Joe Obenburger and Chris Bupp busily scribbled notes for rebuttal.

In preparation for the sectional debates, Alan Posner checked an important fact on passive resistance from the writings of Ghandi.

Debaters Resolved Victory and Achieved Honors

Faced in September with the resolution "That the United States should establish a system of compulsory service by all citizens," Nicolet's debaters spent most free time between then and October in the library diligently preparing for their first debates. Benefiting from practice debates, extensive research, courses on theory and practice of debate, and help from their coach, hopeful debaters confidently entered their first contests. Although shaken at times in debates by introduction of such topics as the proposal to train Americans in non-violent resistance if the Russians or Chinese should attempt an invasion, Nicolet's debaters, appealing to emotions and intellect, argued and orated their way through a very successful year. Improving tremendously from two years ago, when Nicolet placed last in the conference, the debate team captured five tournament trophies, the Braveland Conference title, and confidently qualified for the state sectionals.

Nicolet's "A" division debaters Richard Rubin, Bruce Herman, Mark Hasey, Alan Posner, and Herb Wiedemann displayed trophies won at Sheboygan South, Pro Nono, and Nicolet.

Tournament trophies from Brookfield Central and Homestead evidenced a successful season for debaters Bill Hiller, Jim Gollin, Tony Milanowski, Steve Swidler and Jerry Lieberthal.

Forensics Team Talked Its Way to Victory

As members of the Forensics Team loaded the bus to go to a Saturday tournament, their minds were on one thing—their speeches. During the ride, they reviewed their selections for a final time. A student who did an interpretation of prose from a section of A Tree Grows in Brooklyn tried to remember to have better vocal variety when speaking the part of Neely. Another member, telling a humorous story of the escapades of a high school girl, cautioned herself to speak slowly and to use natural gestures. In the corner of the bus, a student searched her memory for the words, "Let us explore some of the old virtues of integrity, truth, and honor in public life," from the beginning of Herbert Hoover's speech, "Honor in Public Life." Armed with preparation, the team members left the bus and gave their speeches with poise and confidence.

Required to find a significant speech from the past still relevant in meaning today, Marla Morris searched through old issues of Vital Speeches.

As Dawn Champion read her poem "The Toreto" at an after school practice, she concentrated on perfecting her Spanish accent.

Drama Club President Ann Trovinger thoughtfully reviewed the progress of the backstage assignments for The Miracle Worker

Drama Club Included Production and Presentation

Drama Club members first experienced what goes into producing a play in applying makeup for the natives in South Pacific amidst the backstage bustle and suspense. Their concept widened with added responsibilities for The Miracle Worker. For this, members not only did makeup and costuming, but also assembled the props and handled publicity. However, Drama Club didn't always work behind the scenes. Frequent practice in acting and interacting, pantomiming, and reading parts for interpretation furthered members' knowledge of play production.

Several hours before the curtain rose, Drama Club members began to transform the cast into natives of South Pacific

Jeff Roth mysteriously transferred knots from his silk to Bonnie Schumaker's silk in the Sympathetic Silks trick

Nicolet Magic Company Worked on Tricks and Treats

Deep concentration and waving hands caused a lady to float on stage. In the spotlight magicians successfully created illusions, but back stage was not so serene. Magicians clad in blue tuxedos rushed back and forth checking and rechecking equipment for their tricks. One performer waiting to go on, nervously tapped a rhythmic beat. Amid this tense backstage atmosphere, muffled laughter rose at the embarrassed magician on stage who pulled a dead dove from an empty bag. Panic set in when one sorcerer discovered his trick wasn't ready, and a friend on stage would have to ad lib. Finally the magicians anxiously lined up to go on for the grand finale, the Disappearing Alarm Clock trick. With the finale completed and applause sounding, smiling prestidigitators hurried to put the equipment away

Welcoming Smiles Greeted Guests

Twenty-three solemn, but tremulous freshmen faces stared out into the audience at the Nicolet Host Installation. Pride spread across the faces of the sophomore Hosts as they received their service pins. Throughout the year the welcoming smiles of these Nicolet Hosts greeted persons attending sports events, concerts, plays, and musicals. With the same affability, they seated people, took tickets, passed out programs, and checked coats. Through their service, Hosts created a pleasing image of Nicolet for Nicolet's guests.

Chairman Bill Hiller listened intently as Mr. Johnson issued special instructions for ushering.

Even with a throng of people gathering at the door John Jagger kept his Host smile as he took the tickets at the Winter Concert.

Library Interest Triggered Library Club

Keeping the libraries quiet places for study was part of the job of the Nicolet library aides. These fifteen students arranged shelves and checked in books. Each study hall, they faithfully collected yellow passes from all of the students. Then they arranged passes alphabetically and delivered them to the appropriate study halls. Their organization and responsibility in doing their job helped our Nicolet libraries run smoothly.

Most of these library aides continued their interest in library activities after school in the Nicolet Library Club. Miss McMullen, the librarian, began the year with her speech on running a library in a ghetto area. The members later visited the UWM and Milwaukee Public Libraries. Through service and activities, they demonstrated an avid interest in all library functions.

Pep Club Looked New in '68-'69

Through a series of meetings and considerable preparation, Pep Club created a new look. The first evidence of this was the appearance of thirty-five girls at the Brookfield East game dressed in white blouses and blue skirts. Identified by the new uniform, the girls grouped together to form a more effective cheering section. To create even more spirit during the school song, the girls produced a blue and white checkerboard. At the end of the game, the girls enhanced the coach cheer with their cards that spelled out "GRRRREAT," a word that also described the '68-'69 look and sound of Pep Club

During SC lunch, Gail Wilson sold tickets to the Brown Deer game as one of Pep Club's services

During the constitution revision meeting, Jim Picard, Council Vice-President Barry Gimbel, and Fred Croen attempted to draw up a new system for selecting class representatives

Ann Reiner, communications chairman, listened as Robb Cohn suggested that the Student Council Newsletter report on the new impeachment policy

Change Dominated Council

For Student Council this was a year of change in its attitude towards student government. Council desired to redistribute its non-governmental activities such as Blue and White Day and Clash Day to other interested clubs and organizations. The representatives wanted to de-emphasize their social-council image and re-enforce their appearance as an active student power and sounding board. But Council, in the new role it undertook, did not forget its major goal, to represent its classmates

Hard Work Equaled Long Awaited Furnishing

The music started, the kids began to dance, and Youth Council's energetic members uttered a sigh of relief. Another Youth Council dance had begun and decorations for the long awaited D-wing Recreation Center came a little closer to being paid for. Besides tending to the seemingly endless project of getting the rec center ready for its opening, Youth Council kept busy by working on the very popular Hunger Pit, Deck the Halls, and Dad's Date Night. And one mustn't forget that Youth Council was responsible for getting bands, finding sponsors for dances, and setting up the Nicolet Social Calendar. In short Youth Council, in the words of its advisor Mr. Wade, "represented the student body in planning and coordinating social events at Nicolet."

At the 7:00 breakfast Field Day morning, Rick Bernstein auctioned captives Michelle Lakam and Wendy Evard as slaves.

Upholding the agreement that students work on D-wing recreation center, Youth Council members K Sampson, secretary D Lemonds, vice-president N. Schilling, M. Milstein, P. Ritz and president F. Olbrys cleaned the bottom of one of the newly acquired pool tables.

F.T.A.er's Gained Insight Into Teaching

Through initiation to actual teaching experiences, Nicolet's Future Teachers of America looked at the other side of education, the teacher's viewpoint, to discover the meaning of a career in teaching. Accepting membership in October, jittery but willing members were initiated by candle light ceremony. Throughout the year devoted members stationed themselves in E-wing, either correcting math papers, putting up Forensic bulletin boards, or filing Algebra tests, all services of Nicolet's Teacher Aid program. In May, a nervous member played games and read stories to fidgety kindergarteners, probably as nervous as she was, at Good Hope School in the F.T.A. Student Visitation program. At the club's picnic at the end of the year, proud F.T.A.er's received red, silver, or gold apple awards for activities. With the aid of movies, interesting guest speakers, and advice and guidance from Nicolet's own teaching staff, F.T.A. members gained insight into the areas of education and fulfilled, in part, their hopes in becoming the future teachers of America

Amidst the festive atmosphere of their Christmas party, F.T.A. members playing Santa presented advisor Miss Van Beck with a bottle of perfume

N.B.S. Tuned in Second Semester

To the disappointment of countless listeners and the N.B.S. staff itself Nicolet's Broadcasting System was not heard the first semester. Concerned members, through the help of donut sales and personal initiative, helped the club recover from financial difficulties and technical problems to once again bring N.B.S. on the air second semester. Aided by a complete organizational change, new equipment and techniques, N.B.S. technicians and disk jockeys were able to provide better quality broadcasts as the year progressed. Aspiring D.J.'s played Steppenwolf to Bach on tapes and records and cheerfully gave congratulations and transmitted announcements from 11:00 to 1:00, January through June

In the N.B.S. back room, members Jeff Zens, Terry Mixer, and Mike Sitarz adjusted volume on a broadcasting taperecorder to meet present conditions in the cafeteria

Knights Performed Royal Moves

"Checkmate!" A look of complete satisfaction replaced the intense look of concentration on the face of a chess player. As the victor completed his game, a feeling of accomplishment surged through him. Thursday after Thursday he met an opponent in a practice game, readying himself for the year-end tournament.

Scouting a game to learn new techniques Fred Bollow and Mark Garber anticipated Mike Winter's next move.

Strategic Thinking Conquered Checkerboard Squares

Students were jumping to the tune of "King me" and "Double jump" at Checkers Club. Members met each week on Thursday to play checkers with friends. During these games they sharpened their ability to reason and plot moves and attained more logical thinking. At the end of the year, they tested these abilities in a club-sponsored tournament.

Sue Berland contemplated for a moment before jumping the opponent's checker.

President Steve Kirshner grinned down upon his mounting stack of checkers.

Spanish Club Captured the Mood of Spain

The smell of tamales, enchiladas and tacos, the sight of candy scattering from a broken piñata, and the sound of Spanish carols made an enjoyable Christmas fiesta for the Senior Spanish Club. The rhythm of a classical guitarist and the excitement of Spanish word games kept meetings entertaining and profitable. Slides of marketplaces and ancient volcanoes in Guatemala gave members a sense of actually being in a Spanish-speaking land. Through such activities, members became more aware of Spanish culture and improved their knowledge of the Spanish language.

While Howie Gaines swung in vain, Holly Sanderson smiled delightedly at the prospect of getting a chance to swing at the piñata.

CAS Served Creatively

Creative Activity Service sought ways to make others happy. Dressed as Indians, members brought smiles to young faces as they taught the mentally retarded children of Southern Colony to make coffee cans into tom-toms. Then for children at orphanages in South Viet Nam, CAS members collected soap, toothbrushes, and toothpaste. Still collecting, the club turned back to our country to send old glasses to New Jersey to "Sight for the Needy." Members displayed an eager attitude to aid others in all their projects

Les Chevaliers Francais Engendered La Joie

Parlez-vous francais? The answer to this question must have been oui to have joined French Club, for all activities were French oriented. The annual Christmas party, for example, was a French progressive dinner. This spirited holiday party featured French food, Christmas carols, such as "Noel Nouvelet," and games like "A La Bonne Heure," a game similar to Bingo. The comfortable atmosphere of this Christmas party characterized French Club, which enjoyed bike hikes and other informal gatherings rather than business meetings.

The excitement of sampling French food in a Chicago restaurant and of searching out French paintings in the museum there lit up the faces of Sari Luck, Bob Aronson, and Arlene Peltz.

The committee of Ellen Bernstein, Sue Albert, Lorele Gruen, and Jody Mitz made final preparations for French Club's progressive dinner.

The French Club took a break from school routine when they gathered for a bike hike on one of the last warm week-ends.

A.F.S. Featured International Spirit

A spontaneous combustion of ideas exploded when the officers and advisors of A.F.S. club met in December to formulate plans for the upcoming exchange program in February and the annual Fiesta Night. As excitement surged and plans developed, the secretary furiously scribbled notes: "Exchange students spend week before Fiesta Night. Party planned with Brookfield Central." Then the trend of ideas shifted to the gay, fun-filled Fiesta Night. Shouting voices developed ideas: "Make posters! Call the Herald. Have dancing at 6.00 and 8.00, spaghetti dinner at 5.00-7.00." The detail and enthusiasm of planning transformed into excellent results for the club's members. The holiday spirit of the Christmas party, the fun of Fiesta Night, and the excitement of the exchange program brought the international flavor of A.F.S. to Nicolet.

With an inviting smile Lilianna Cozodoy tempted Santa Claus, Durward Watson, to have a bite of her cupcake.

President Madeleine Crivello smiled with delight at the mounting number of enthusiastic members signed up on Secretary Rea Katz's Fiesta Night food list.

Animated members responded to the prospect of housing exchange students from Jefferson, Wisconsin.

Germany's Tilman Goetting, a participant in the International Youth Exchange displayed a creative style during his stay at Nicolet. Til's attire often caused girls to look twice at his continental outfits, consisting of buckled loafers, striped bell bottoms, and brightly colored turtle-neck sweaters. An artistic interest led him to enter a still-life sketch in an area art contest. Finally, Til also contributed musically to Nicolet. He drummed with the marching band and bowed mellow sounds for the finale of "Younger Than Springtime."

Graceful, dark-haired Liliana Cozodov from Argentina discovered North America. She felt the sharp, tingling sting of cold snow on her face and took advantage of Yankee tips on the mastery of complicated skills of tennis and badminton. This South American A.F.S.'er gathered matchboxes, napkins, and sugar packages as mementos of her year abroad.

A.F.S.'ers Shared Their Worlds

Friendly, outgoing, and uninhibited, Rhodesia's Jeremy Gaylard seemed to be an A.F.S.'er able to do anything. Multi-talented Jem could say "I love you" in twenty-three languages. He took to the slopes of Iron Mountain, Michigan during an A.F.S. skiing week-end. He brought his British accent to the portrayal of Captain Brackett in "South Pacific" and earnestly presented the South African view point in Student Council meetings.

Armed with a Spanish-English dictionary, French student Madeline Crivello departed for Cali, Columbia. From June until August she lived in a different world where afternoon visits lasted from four to eleven at night and mothers chaperoned dates. Madeline's new friends offered her garlicky foods, excited speech, and too brief siestas. When she arrived home, our A.F.S. girl was greeted with questions such as: What was your family like? What kind of clothes did you wear? What were the boys like? questions that kept alive her unforgettable visit.

Hall Monitors Controlled Corridor Traffic

Echoing footsteps interrupted the stillness of an empty hall. The alert hall monitor immediately looked up to see who was approaching. The footsteps paused as the hall monitor's eyes searched for the appropriate pink pass. Then with the fading of footsteps, the hall again took on its overwhelming silence, and the Nicolet hall monitor continued to study

Members Explored Russian Kultura

A hearty meal of Beef Stroganoff, Piroshki, and Borcht, served at the annual Homestead banquet, began a full year for the Russian Club member. At Christmas time the club members, following the old Russian tradition, heralded the arrival of Father Frost with slavic delicacies and mistletoe. At other meetings members showed movies and slides taken on the Russian trip two summers ago. Pictures of Spasky Tower, the statue of Peter the Great, and the Kremlin acquainted members with the people and sights of Russia. These meetings culminating in a merry end of the year banquet left the members with a feeling for Russia and her culture

German Club Accented Good Times

Emotions sparked German Club members during their varied activities this year. During Homecoming, the members screamed with excitement when they heard their entry "The Red Baron Votes Knights" won the Homecoming float competition. In October, members lost in the maze of Kettle Moraine felt frantic, but with German perseverance finally arrived at their destination. At the annual Christmas party, delighted faces acknowledged the presents that Sankt Nicklaus gave, while German Club's Bumpskapelle, an oompha band, played

Free Expression Typified Social Studies Club

Freedom to express an opinion—this was the feeling that Social Studies Club reflected. The members exhibited this feeling when they invited Sam Salter to talk about Black militancy. Communiqué, Social Studies Club's newspaper, also showed this feeling. Since students voiced opinions on any subject, Communiqué was not only an open door for the student, but also a stimulating force that made students think and take a stand.

Biology Club Explored the Unusual

"That one is mine," was the cry as Biology Club held its first annual Frog Hopping contest during the Devil's Lake weekend outing in October. This was just one of Biology Club's exciting activities for the '68-'69 season. In September during the fall canoe trip, enthusiastic club members paddled through the pouring rain. Later in the year, they rang in the holiday season with their fund raising project, cutting and bailing their own Christmas trees for sale to the school faculty. With spring came the Biology Club camp-out to the Michigan State Dunes. All these activities, plus pot hole blasting at Mr. Strehlow's farm, trips to the zoo, and informative speakers, filled the year with memorable experiences in fun and learning.

'Heave! Hooray!' Busy outdoorsman put evergreen trees through the bailing machine

Rifle Club Performed on Target

Sharp reports of rifles echoed in the ears of Nicolet Junior Rifle Club members aiming for bulls-eyes at the Glendale Police Department. Often on Wednesday nights the boys practiced shooting in prone, sitting, kneeling, and standing positions. Using competition style, they each earned awards provided by the National Rifle Association, with which the club is affiliated. Rifle Club used the traditional donut sales to raise money for buying equipment including mats, scopes, and rifles. Someday the sharpshooters hope to compete with other clubs and acquire their own shooting facilities.

D. Kruse peered through his rifle sights at the bulls-eye the camera lens.

D. Kruse, M. Freshwaters, and J. Lewin watched as Mr. Widmar explained the procedures for scoring targets.

FBLA members Debra Johnson, Barb Rolter, Debbie Woolweber, Karen Peters and Julie Pfeiffer practiced parliamentary procedure for future competition.

One of the many different scenes Rick Rand enjoyed after buying a box of W'sconsin Note Cards was that of the state's northern forests.

FBLA Strived for Success

After winning the National Gold Seal Chapter Award for going over and above the required duties for an FBLA chapter, members of FBLA determined to repeat the success at this year's convention. Participating in a mock meeting, members practiced parliamentary procedure, a contest which they had placed second at last year's convention. In another room, enthusiastic FBLA'ers participated in a practice spelldown to prepare them for Green Lake competition. However, not all of their time was spent on convention activities. During the year, members planned activities related to their business interests. A field trip to the billing offices of the Telephone Company showed students data processing and computer installations. A visit to the offices of Globe Union helped to make them aware of one of the businesses in this community. At the end of the year, seniors benefited from the opportunity of working at an office. Through their participation in club activities, FBLA members prepared for their futures in the business world.

Lynn Ceaman and Linda Breul faced eager paper, pencil and pen customers every morning at the school store.

Students Realized Natural Beauty

Reviewing the year's activities, members of Earth Science Club recalled their camping trips to various parts of Wisconsin to observe different land formations. They remembered the beautiful and once glacier-ridden land of the Kettle Moraine Area. On another trip, to Southwestern Wisconsin, members noted differences of this unglaciated area from that of the land of Kettle Moraine. Speakers on fossils, films on weather and meteorology, slides of the Pacific Northwest, a trip to the Museum of Science and Industry, the knowledge and enjoyment of the year—all came back. On and on the memories flowed.

Using the celestial globe, club members located earth's relationship to the moon.

Aided by a stropescope, Science Club members celebrated the frequencies of water waves on a ripple tank.

Science Club Worked for Discoveries

Eyes of Science Club members brightened with interest and amazement as fellow club members demonstrated the extraordinary reaction caused by mixing powder aluminum and iron oxide or explained the simplicity of measuring the mass of electrons. Besides experiments, members worked on individual projects to enter at science fairs. Among the many were desalinating seawater, suspending and reviving animation, and stressing rats to produce dental caries. Through club activities, members researched to further their knowledge of scientific technique.

From fifteen hundred feet above ground, Nicolier's "Apollo" spacecraft focused its camera lens on the school's athletic fields.

NHS Control Launched Successful Projects

The Rocket Club member tensely awaited the landing of his capsule. In past weeks, he had energetically researched and analysed the making of a rocket. He had carefully selected a design and thoughtfully chosen the color, weight, and texture of his materials. He made the necessary measurements and calculations to determine the desired altitude and velocity. Then arrived the moment of The Launch. Expectantly, he turned his face skyward. His brow wrinkled, he pondered his rocket's fate. Finally, the parachute burst open; the rocket landed on target. He felt great pride in this triumph.

With a powerful upward thrust of nine pounds, this rocket began its journey through the sky.

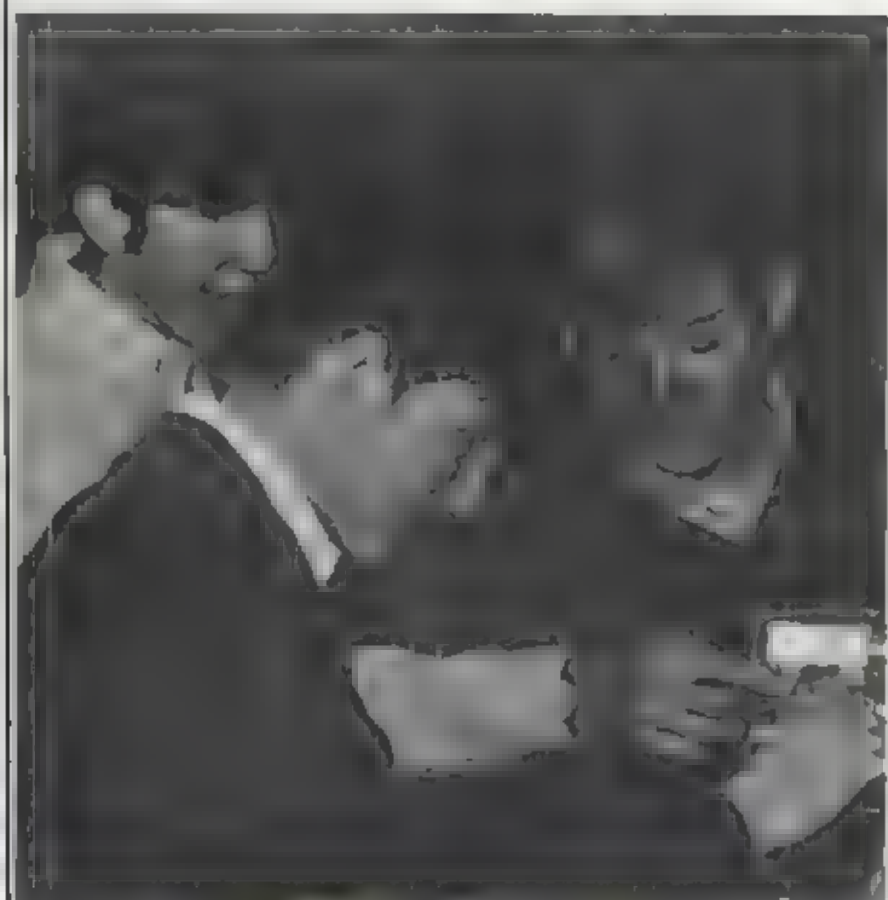

Scott Tilton, Mark Cooper, and Keith Chen observed as Steve Shapson and Don Greb weighed their rocket to determine its upward thrust.

A-V Aides Expanded Their Services

Throughout the year, Audio-Visual Aides assisted in the technical work involved in film programs. Several boys came to Nicolet evenings to provide community groups with projectionists. One club member, Carl Blesch, produced educational photographic materials, which Nicolet teachers used for instructional purposes. Along with Mr. Sund, club members set up the noon film program, managing the light and sound systems for it. When not otherwise occupied, they met informally to discuss newer, more effective ways of handling audio-visual equipment.

Listening intently to Mr. Sund, Dennis Pehoski, Jeff Zens, and Carl Blesch learned the workings of the lighting control panel in the Little Theater.

Programming Intrigued Math Club

Math Club was like a jigsaw puzzle, in that pieces of mathematical information fit together. Having programmed the "101", Math Club members felt the triumph of reading the computer's correct answers. In discussions and through presentation of projects, members gained insight into the theory of games, into Godol's proof, and into linear programming. To these students, Math Club brought a feeling of challenge and accomplishment.

Math Club members pondered Carolyn Whiting and Lois Otto's explanation of equalities, a concept of linear programming.

Water Nymphs Danced in the Night

"Shall We Dance," from The King and I, introduced the 1969 water ballet show, the main project of the Nicolet Aqua Knights. Adorned in a costume unique to a particular country, each swimmer emphasized grace as she displayed representative folk dances. A solo of the melodious "Scarborough Fair," a duet by two geisha girls, and group routines such as the Dutch shoe dance or the Egyptian belly dance created a world of dancing. A note of laughter presided also, as characterized in America's familiar "dos-a-dos." As a finale, each girl proudly swam in the appropriate climax, "I Could Have Danced All Night."

Nancy Schilling demonstrated a gesture from her geisha girl duet

Gymnastics Club Highlighted NGA

A group of energetic girls identified by red and white carnations scurried through the corridors on Valentines Day. These students were members of the Gymnastics Club, the new addition to NGA. During practices they experimented with various interpretations of basic exercises such as the Jumping Jack or the Toe Touch. Then they carefully worked out a creative routine and presented it during half time at the basketball game on Valentines Day. At least once a week, these girls joined other NGA'ers to concentrate on the traditional sports such as volleyball and basketball. Competing against each other, each member used all her efforts in hopes of victory for her team.

Lettermen Promoted Athletics Through Service

Lettermen not only went through the rigors of competition for their school but also served Nicolet when out of uniform. Two roles were thus created, and both were active ones. While some members participated in the spotlight on the football field or on the basketball court, others helped time for swim meets, served refreshments at games, and worked at scoring tables. The boys in Varsity Club carried out a two-fold job, with both parts aimed at serving Nicolet.

B. Mandel, J. Hoffman, and N. Siegal paraded Varsity Club's victory float during the Tip Off pep rally.

Intramurals Sparked Active Participation

Intramurals was a two-season program. In the fall, football enthusiasts met behind the school on week-day afternoons to take part in supervised touch and flag games. Participants experimented to find the position that suited them best and finally served in that capacity on their teams. When the winter months moved in, footballs were exchanged for basketballs, and the scene switched to the new gym where the shrill cries of referees' whistles and the pounding of running feet prevailed. Players exercised basic fundamentals in the presence of spirited competition. All boys involved felt that the intramurals program was a worthwhile recreational activity, giving interested boys the opportunity to participate.

Daryl Willong snared a rebound from Marty Goldin and Ed Stenzel empty-handed by his opponent.

Dan Rechi attempted the fundamental jump shot in the midst of a crowd.

Paperback Bookstore Encouraged Reading

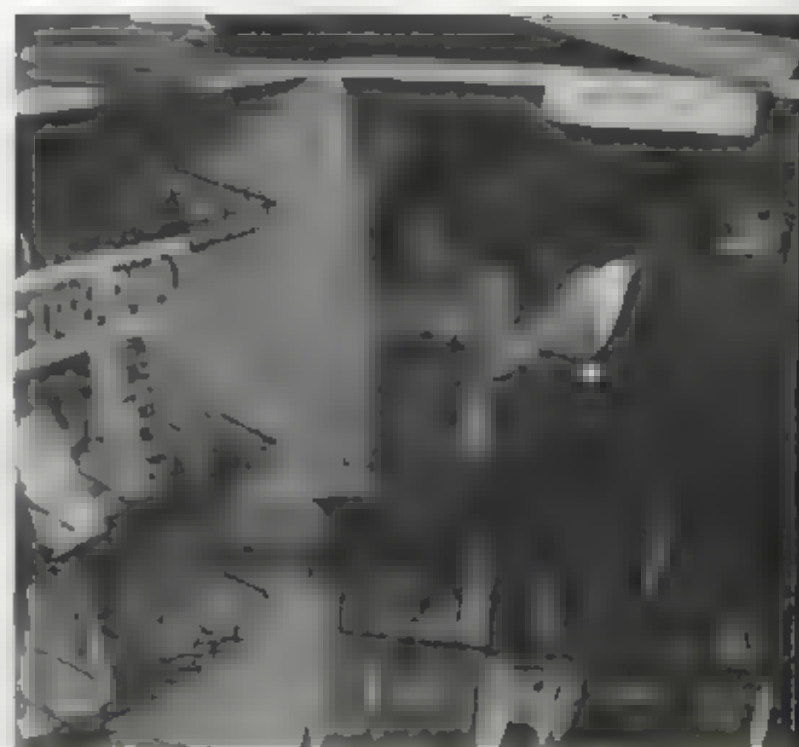

Red books, orange books, blue books served as backgrounds for the sophomore book venders. Titles such as In Cold Blood, Invisible Man, and Silent Spring attracted passers-by. Perhaps The Hobbit or The Angry Hills drew a student to the store window, where fellow students stood ready to help him make a selection. On Tuesdays and Thursdays from eleven to one, students could conveniently enrich their own paperback libraries right here at Nicolet.

Cyndie Frank scanned the General Fiction Section to find Gone With the Wind for a noon time customer.

Noon Recreation Depended on Student Supervisors

Two strong hands belonging to a thunderous voiced lunchroom supervisor formed an insurmountable barricade against a hungry student trying to sneak into the already teeming cafeteria. At the same time, the placid face of a library supervisor surveyed the quiet scene of students working in F-wing library. In the gym, the noon recreation supervisor joined his friends in a game of fast moving basketball. Numbering one hundred, these responsible students worked together with their peers to maintain a more relaxed atmosphere.

Supervisor Sharon Sosman changed to the Beatles' new record after several requests from noon recreation participants.

A friendly game of cards, a good joke, and a complaint about last hour's exam occupied the free hour for these freshmen boys

Conserving his energy for the afternoon wrestling meet, D. White played a less strenuous but nonetheless exciting game of table soccer

Noon Rec Stumbled Through Second Year

Noon recreation experienced a slow start—study groups until mid-October. Shakily and chaotically the program started forward, gained momentum, then halted. Youth Council, Student Council, Senior Council, and advisors met to discuss two major problems—an insufficient number of supervisors and an overcrowded lunch room. Finally the problems were resolved, and noon rec resumed with the thud of basketballs, the silence of the library, the roar of the cafeteria, and the blare of music

Although the program was titled noon recreation, C. Staats and L. Flowers competed fiercely in a basketball game

Drill Team's Practice Brought Half-Time Entertainment

The student visitor viewing one of the many practices of drill team heard shouts of "Keep your arms straight" or "Smile!" Immediately the onlooker noted that all eyes focused on the now empty stands. Alertly, he spied wrinkling foreheads as intent girls concentrated on the beats of the music to make their kicks and claps at the exact times.

At games as the band struck the opening notes of the school song, spectators saw the results of the long hours of practice. They noticed shaking pompoms going to the right and to the left. Others soon recognized legs kicking high and hands clapping to the beat of the music. These drill team girls had perfected their skills to spark the half-time spirit of athletic events.

Creative Dance Created Art

Creative dancers concentrated on painting images with their bodies. Through body movement they developed coordination and conveyed their personalities. New sources of feeling evolved from the joint action of arms and legs. In Nicolet's "South Pacific" each member relied on her own creative expression to choreograph the dance scenes. On stage she enhanced the play by her rapid leaps and her lively kicks. Each movement achieved an important part of artistic grace.

HONORS

National Honor Society Initiated Seventy-Five

A spring ceremony provided a background for the initiation of 1968-69 National Honor Society members. Chosen on the basis of leadership, character, service and scholarship, over sixty juniors, one by one, accepted the gold membership pins and shook hands with Dr. Rees. Through speeches, members from the class of 1968 impressed upon the initiates the solemnity and honor of the occasion. Faculty and parents joined the new members for refreshments at a reception afterwards.

Journalistic Excellence Merited Quill and Scroll

On Wednesdays, Fridays, and Saturdays, students on Nicolet's publications pored over the messages of creative minds, constructed resumes of the year's activities in pictures and words, and shifted pictures artistically. Seniors of Shield, Knights' Page, Crest, and Shield Art worked with diligence for two years, ranked in the upper third in scholarship, and accepted responsibility. For all these qualities they received membership in Quill and Scroll, Nicolet's journalistic honor society.

This year, varsity football's goal was to win the conference championship. Throughout practice sessions, the Knights built confidence and determination. They met their first test by trouncing Cedarburg 28 to 2. The next game, though, proved to be frustrating for the Knights, who came close to a victory over much-hated Brookfield Central but finally lost. The bus ride home reflected the agonizing defeat in the long faces and tears of many seniors. However, a silent pledge was also made to finish as close to Central as possible. The pledge was kept, as the Knights finished the year with a 7 and 1 conference record, 1 game behind Central and the conference championship

J.V. Unified Varied Skills

Junior varsity football involved excellent freshmen, average sophomores, or juniors overshadowed by seniors. During practice, coaches organized their diverse material into one team unit. Then, this unit gained experience by scrimmaging the varsity. To help them, the J.V. imitated the opposing school's plays, giving the varsity an idea of what to expect. However, on Thursdays, the J.V.'s concern turned to their own games. Using all that they had learned, the J.V. compiled a record of 4 and 3 for the season.

Attempting an open field tackle, Nicolet's tackler lacked force, as his legs strayed behind him.

Youth and Speed Dominated the Regionals

August 26 started the Knights on their annual cross country run. Preparing for this trek was a team nucleus consisting of one sophomore and five juniors, along with 58 other runners. Nineteen afternoons passed quickly as the Knights ran their 2.2 mile practice course at Klettsch Park. September 14th marked the start of the Harriers' competitive season. It was a year of ups and downs for the Knights. Disappointments came first when the runners placed fifth in the sole conference meet. However, October 19th highlighted the Knights season as they raced to a victory in the regional meet at Cedarburg.

Kurt Bostad, culminating eight weeks of practice, finished fourth in a field of 48 in the regional meet at Cedarburg.

Their combination of expressive yells and cheers ignited the crowd's enthusiasm. During the action, the cheerleaders focused on the ball. Every now and then, they urged encouraging shouts for the team. When the buzzer announced half time, the cheerleaders skipped out to the middle of the court. With a combination of cartwheels, splits, and jumps, Nicolet officially welcomed the opposing team. During the second half, the cheerleaders increased their pitch, inspiring the crowd, urging the team, demanding victory. The last seconds of the game counted off, the buzzer sounded and the cheerleaders leaped in the air for the victors.

Matmen Outmaneuvered Opponents

When Coach Strehlow met with prospective wrestlers in early November, he stressed dedication as the most important key to success. Practice sessions followed during which the eighty-four boys acquired greater endurance as a result of running laps and doing calisthenics. This endurance was as necessary for wrestling as specific holds. The coaches taught the boys different take downs, releases, and escapes. Two months and two cuts later, Nicolet's wrestling team consisted of its present fifty-four man squad. Led by Kurt Krueger and Frank Olbrys, Nicolet's Varsity Wrestling Squad completed the season with a nine, zero, and two dual meet record.

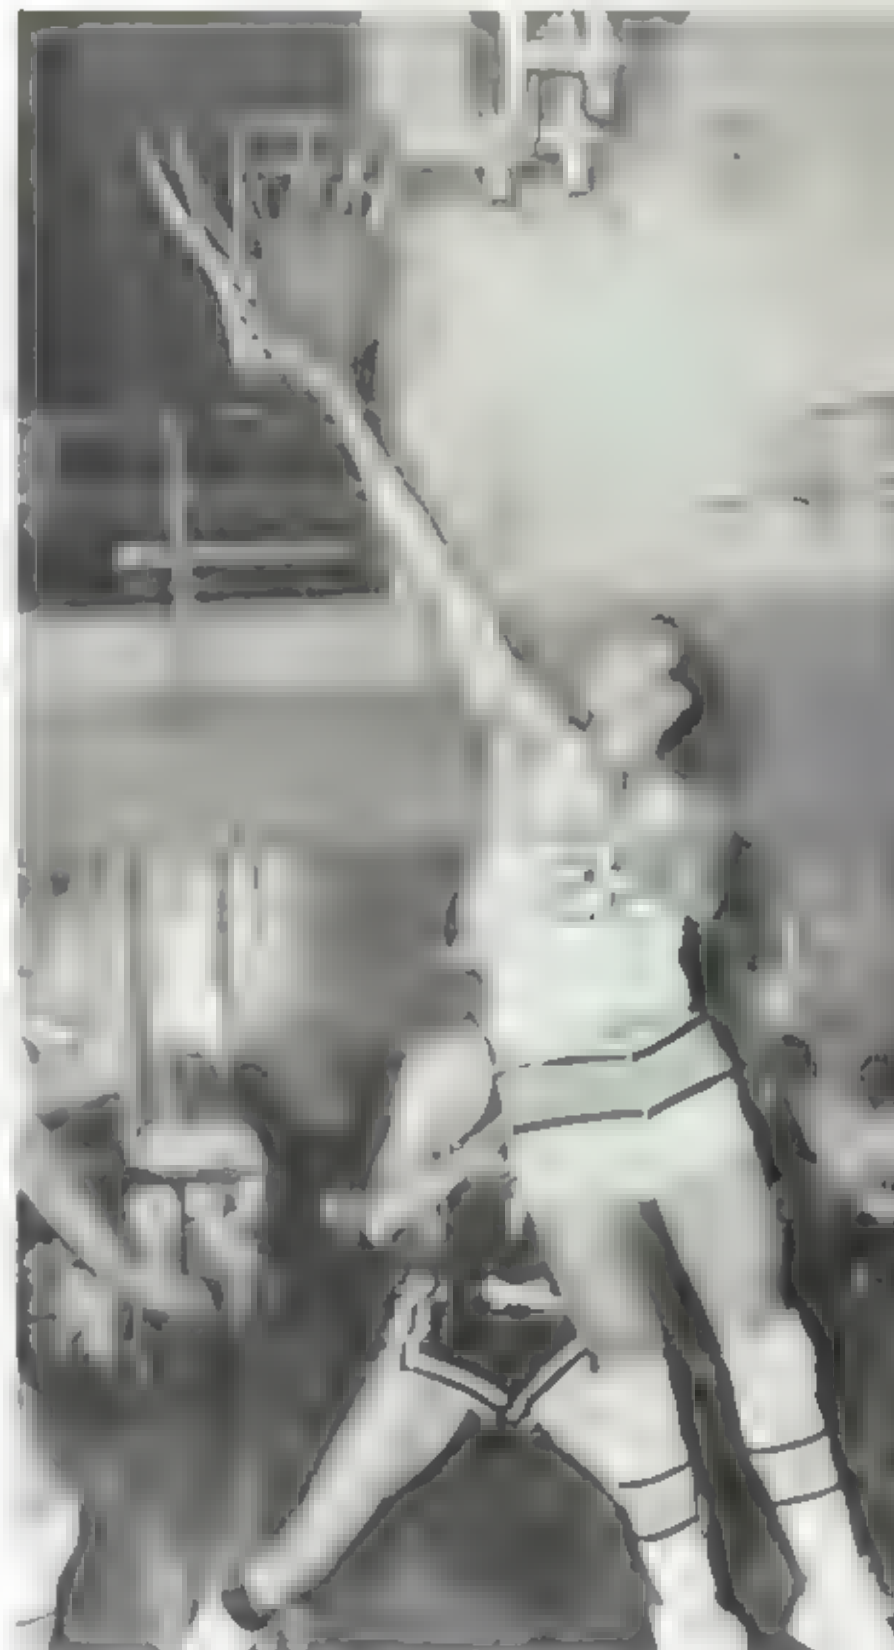

Using a leg ride, Kurt Krueger wrestled Brown Deer's Al Lukach to a draw.

Cagers Stretched

Friday, November eighth, started the Knights on their way to a hopefully successful Braveland Conference Championship. Coach Puls mentioned four qualities necessary for a winning team. The first characteristic was experience. The Knights were well qualified in this area, as all five of the starters were seniors who had played varsity ball the previous year. The second necessity was that a team be tough on the boards. Steve Bazelon and Jay Grieger led the Knights in the rebounding department. Thirdly, quickness was essential. Weak in this quality the Knights strove to improve this by anticipating their opponents' moves. Combined with these three physical skills was a fourth intangible quality, esprit de corps. This was a strength of the Knights who had a great desire to win.

Led by all-conference players Steve Bazelon and Jim Bronson the Knights established a 13-5 conference record. Following the regular season, these stressed qualities came into place, as the Knights went on to defeat three conference champions including Menomonee Falls on their way to Madison. For the first time in Nicolet history the Knights joined seven other teams in the State Basketball Tournament. There, cheered on by enthusiastic backers, Nicolet upset favored Lincoln, while losing close games to Neenah and Kimberly. For the entire year the Knights compiled a 19-7 record.

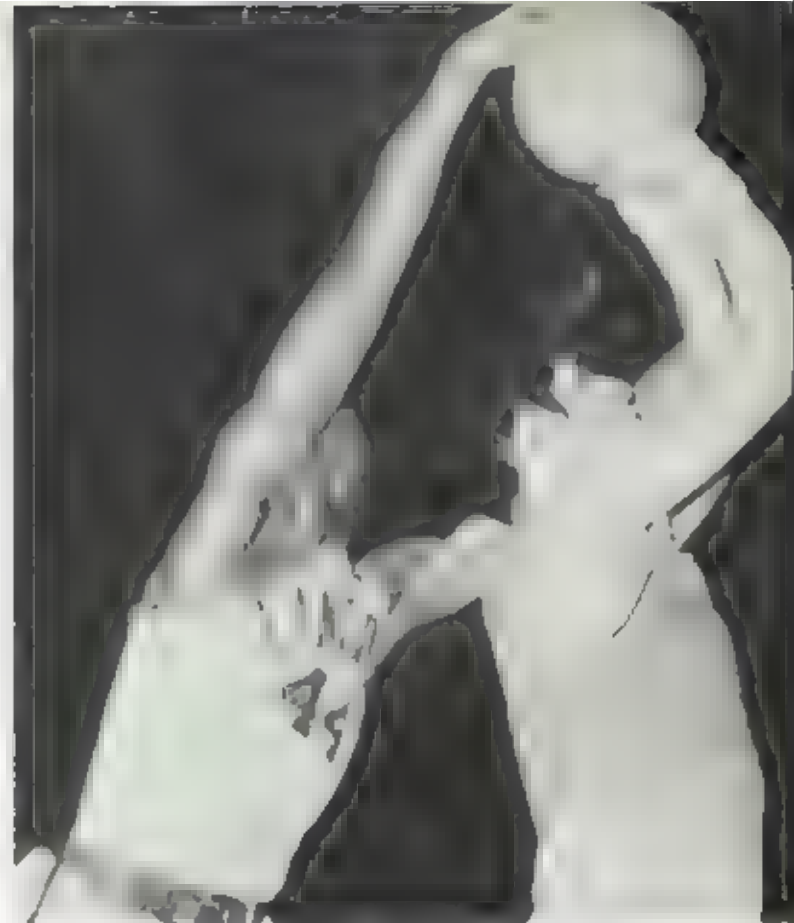

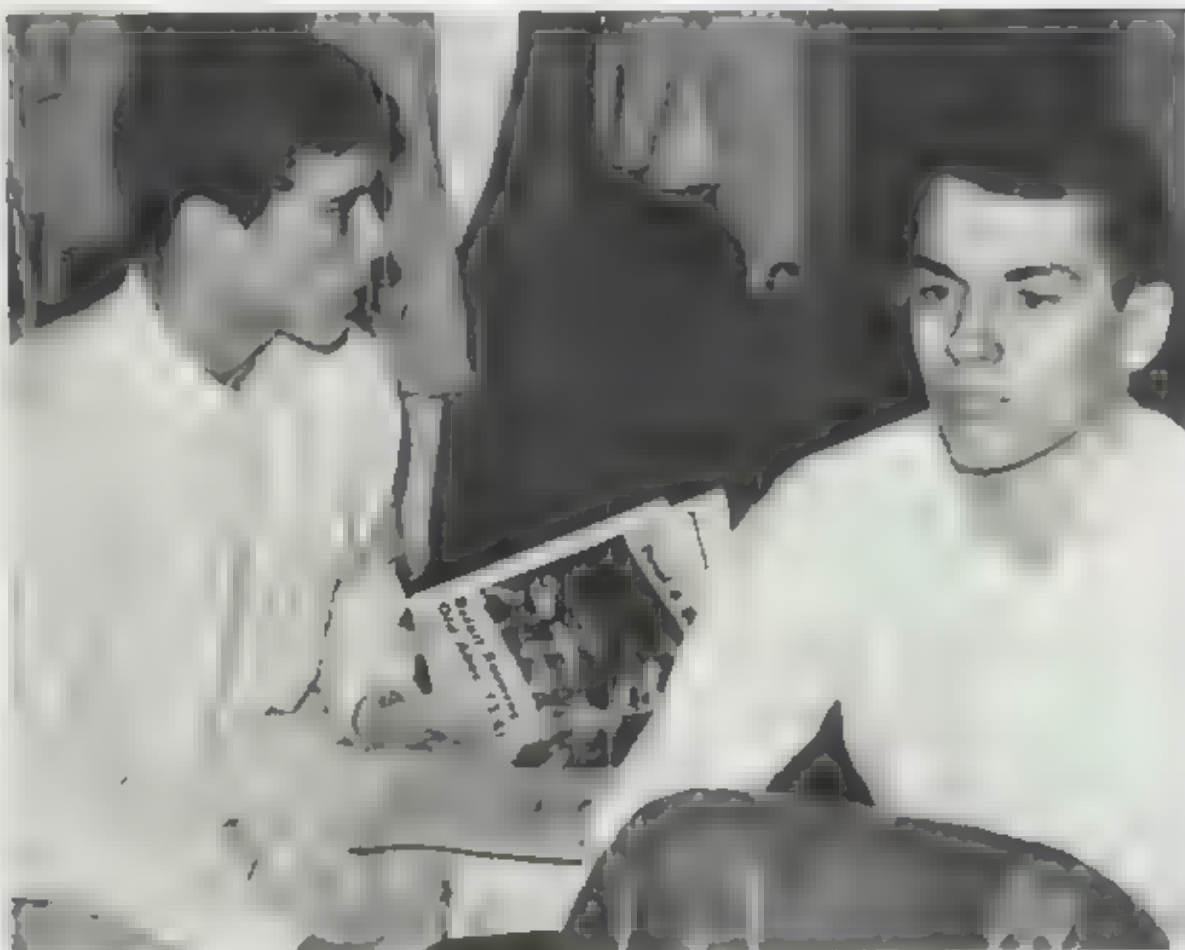

Unable to get his original shot off, J. Bronson circled the basket, putting in a reverse lay-up.

Swimmers Logged Many Miles

Plunging into the water on November fourth, Nicolet swimmers didn't emerge until March first. Prior to their first meet, swimmers practiced daily from 6:00 to 7:30 a.m. and from 4:00 to 5:15 p.m. During practice sessions, boys concentrated not only on improving form but also on building endurance. As of January eighth the sprinters, boys who swam short distances, had totaled 230,000 yards, and the distance men had totaled 250,000 yards. Christmas vacation was no interruption for these boys. During the holidays, the swimmers raced for an average of 10,500 yards daily. By February fifteenth, the boys, through all their hard hours of practice, placed second in the conference.

Tennis Squads Stroked

Familiar faces sparked the already talented '68 team. Four returning lettermen led the Nicolet netters to another winning season. The determination that showed on every player's face during a match reflected the hard work and dedication that had gone into practice sessions. This constant drive for perfection resulted in the team's 300th consecutive conference match win and its eleventh straight conference championship. This group's winning ways did not halt there: The squad went on to capture the regional, the sectional, and ultimately the state championship trophies, to keep these prized possessions in the Nicolet showcase for the second successive year.

The Junior Varsity record closely paralleled the Varsity boxscore. A unified effort by the squad as a whole produced an undefeated season. Cindermen Trounced Competition

Nicolet's track squad vaulted, jumped, hurdled, and raced its way to a record '68 season. The unparalleled performances of individual Nicolet athletes, combined into a powerful team effort, captured crown and glory for the Knights. The perfected pivot and thrusting groan of a shot putter, supported by his brawn and might, added extra distance. A long jumper's flawless form, legs extended and arms tensed, face grimacing in the struggle for victory, leaped Nicolet forward. Whether sprinting with quick, powerful steps or pacing themselves with long, energy-saving strides, runners carried Nicolet to victory. Moving from triumph in the Braveland Relays early in the season, the Knights fought their way to the Braveland Conference Championship, to a first place success at the WIAA Sectional, and finally to a rank of third in the state.

Knights Swung Their Way to Victory

Three times a week linksmen travelled to Brown Deer or Lincoln to play nine or eighteen holes of golf. During these practice sessions the coach spotted the boys on a streak or in a slump. From this pre-match knowledge, the coach picked the four boys who would best represent the team the following day. Nicolet was well represented as the linksmen won a majority of their dual meets to bring the Conference Championship to Nicolet. The Knights then drove on to a fourth place finish in the state meet.

Effort Brought Improvement in Nicolet Baseball

Summer baseball allowed freedom in the scheduling of practices. During regular practice sessions, players either perfected skills, such as hitting, fielding, and pitching, or developed team strategy for upcoming games. However, during extra practices, the boys tried to improve their own specialties: a catcher practiced throwing to second base; a pitcher drilled on his pick-off move to first. This extra effort enabled a team without great ability or experience to improve upon its previous season to finish with an 8 and 8 record.

PEOPLE OF NICOLET

SCHOOL BOARD Mr. Radtke Mrs. Herrick Mr. Schackleton
Mr. Johnson, Mr. Cupery, Mr. Speight, Mr. Brachman, Dr.
Reiels

Mr. Cupery, Nicolet's superintendent, worked with the community and guided all Nicolet's personnel. Through his direction, Nicolet in 1968 gave "students a much more adaptable and flexible type of education, more opportunity to get the education that they want, and more involvement in classes." In his view, the involvement of students and teachers was "very sound educationally."

Listened to Student Requests

Dr. Reiels' schedule left him few free hours. Focusing his administrative energies on widening communication channels, Nicolet's principal met with heads of departments, small faculty groups, students, and parents. He was interested in planning new curriculum offerings and educational programs to be accommodated by the more flexible facilities. Dr. Reiels found his counseling even more demanding and dynamic this year because the students were "more concerned about the lessons they're learning," and were "more intellectually curious and desirous of achieving their goals."

Mr. Radtke, Business Administrator, adeptly managed Nicolet financially. Faced with an aware community that desired to know more about their school and its operation, Mr. Radtke explored programmed budgeting and other new techniques in handling expenditures. Mr. Radtke saw the demands of his job as "more involving and more complete than ever before because of the search for new sources of income to support education."

Directed New Programs

To meet the requirements of his job, Mr. Leussler ought to have been in many places at the same time. Closeted with problem students and students with problems, advising committees and Student Council, planning co-curricular programs with faculty and administration, Mr. Leussler hurried to fulfill his responsibilities as Administrative Assistant. In his contacts with all types of students, he noticed their increased activism and interest in current affairs. Although Mr. Leussler claimed that adjusting to new student attitudes was difficult, he worked smoothly with students to effectively carry out Nicolet's programs and policies.

Mr. Hayes, one of Nicolet's Assistant Administrators, spent much of his time with our computer, arranging schedules and working with data processing. His duties also extended into areas of curriculum planning and discipline. In his dealings with the Nicolet Student of 1968-9, he noticed some significant trends. Confronted by students who seemed "to be aware of changes, who are involved in things going on outside of school," he felt he "had to do homework more to be able to converse with students and be able to understand their desires and feelings." Yet he found his efforts rewarded, for "it was stimulating to carry on a dialogue" with articulate students anxious for change.

As co-curriculum coordinator in Nicolet's district, as reading consultant, and as teacher, Mrs. Sargent saw opportunities to provide an "enriched educational experience for the students who are attending Nicolet, students who are more independent, enthusiastic and self-initiative," as she saw them. Working with both elementary and high schools made Mrs. Sargent aware of exciting innovations and of the promising results, an observation that gave her enjoyment.

As Recreation Director, Mr. Wade had responsibilities in diverse areas. He directed Adult Education, advised Youth Council in social matters, supervised Nicolet's gym, pool, tennis courts, and tied together class activities with his handling of mechanics, such as dance decorations, chaperones, and cash boxes. This year, the planning of the D-wing basement recreation center was an essential activity. Mr. Wade worked with student committees all year "selecting the theme, planning the decor, choosing and purchasing the equipment and planning the program." Mr. Wade felt that student involvement was very important in the success of this venture.

Mr. Melvin Frank

In the death of Mr. Melvin Frank, Nicolet lost one of the most capable and respected faculty members. The shock that accompanied his death on October 11, 1968, was especially felt because of the spontaneous friendship that he extended to faculty and students.

In the classroom, Mr. Frank was patient and thorough, explaining the details of business education until every student understood. He tried to remove the pressure of grades and tests by reducing their importance and by always making himself available for extra help.

Mr. Frank is remembered for the relaxing atmosphere of his classroom, his tolerant nature, and his willingness to help students with any problem.

Determined, Stunned and Jubilant Faces Expressed State—1969

Coming from seventeen points behind Nee-nah, Nicolet scored thirty-three points in the fourth quarter to stimulate hopes of victory.

Cheerleading funds provided the costume for volunteer Neil Siegel to bring Nicolet's Knight to life at the State tournament

At Madison, Coach Puls distributed clean uniforms to Steve Bazelon, Jim Treu, and Jay Grieger

Although Coach Puls drilled "We can win" into the minds of varsity players, Jim Bronson knew Nicolet needed "a super game" to beat Lincoln
